AutoGuard Announces 4,000 Mile Beta Test

Worldwide Iron Inc. parent company of AutoGuard is pleased to announce the results of a 4,000 mile Beta test performed on the highly anticipated AutoGuardGreen Fuel System. AutoGuard a hallmark in the aftermarket automotive accessory industry has completed its longest beta test of over 4,000 miles driven over seven days on a 2007 Chevrolet Silverado in all kinds of varying weather conditions from the desert to rain, snow, wind and cold encountered on our journey from Arizona to Minnesota and back. Results are readily available via the AutoGuard tracking device that monitored this test on a 15 minute interval.

The fuel system returned a 43.1% increase in mileage throughout all of these conditions. The majority of the testing done to date has been in intervals of 50 to 200 miles some of them in simulated conditions. This is the first time we've taken a truck on the open road to test it for effects of driving over thousands of miles. The fuel system will be released to the market on January 15, 2009. The company is very excited about the sales potential the fuel system has in both the consumer level and the business fleet level. WWI is one of only a few companies in the country had been able to prove our testing results both on installation and road conditions to achieve increases in mileage of 30% and above on a consistent basis. WWI believes that we will be able to meet our introduction date of January 15 on about seven of every 10 models on the road today.
